

I strongly object to the proposal of BellSouth's request to exclude independent ISPs from access to DSL. I use a small, responsible, independant ISP in my area and have had considerably better service than the service provided by the big ISPs and reported by the customers I serve in my position of Helpdesk for an online community.

Being a big company should not allow anyone to exclude small companies from Internet resources.